

PART I
INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION OF
DIOCESE OF LEXINGTON
REGARDING THE PROTECTION OF CHILDREN AND
YOUNG PEOPLE BY CATHOLIC CLERGY
AUGUST 14, 2020

INTRODUCTION

The Diocese of Lexington has undertaken an independent investigation and review of all priest files, victim files and other documents related to sexual conduct involving a minor by any current or former bishop, priest or member of a religious order currently or formerly ordained by or assigned to the territory of the Lexington Diocese. Based on this review, the Lexington Diocese is releasing the names of priests against whom one or more allegations of sexual abuse have been found to be substantiated or credible.

The report also includes the names of priests who served, however briefly, in the territory of the Lexington Diocese and who have been listed by other Dioceses or religious communities as having a credible allegation of child sexual abuse. The report also contains the name of a priest who was accused of child sexual abuse, but the abuse is unsubstantiated because enough evidence exists that the allegation did not occur as claimed.

Currently, there are no pending allegations of child sexual abuse involving any priest in active ministry.

BACKGROUND

The Diocese of Lexington was established in 1988 by Pope John Paul II and formed from parts of the Archdiocese of Louisville and the Diocese of Covington, representing 50 counties in Central and Eastern Kentucky. The review included allegations that occurred in the Diocese of Lexington after its formation in 1988, as well as substantiated or credible allegations against priests in either the Archdiocese of Louisville or the Diocese of Covington prior to 1988 who were serving in parishes that are now in the Diocese of Lexington.

SCOPE AND METHODOLOGY OF THE INVESTIGATION AND REVIEW

The Diocese sought a review by independent investigators who were previously unaffiliated with the Diocese or the Catholic Church. The investigators were given full access to diocesan records and personnel files. All complaints submitted to the Victim Assistance Coordinator and the Diocese's Review Board were also reviewed.

Any file review is limited by the material that has been submitted and retained by the organization. In an attempt to obtain all information concerning allegations of sexual abuse, the Diocese published multiple notices in every parish newsletter advising people of the review. The notices provided contact information which allowed individuals to directly communicate with the investigators, with no interaction with any personnel from the Diocese. Finally, an article describing the independent review and requesting any victims to contact the investigators was published in the Lexington Herald Leader, the largest newspaper in the Diocese.

The review team conducted interviews, talked with the Victim's Assistance Coordinator, and met with the Diocesan Review Board. In short, the investigators were granted unlimited and unfettered access to all files and documents, all personnel, and all policies and procedures. The files maintained on behalf of those victims and others reporting allegations contained documents related to sexual conduct involving a minor by members of the clergy, whether reported, alleged, suspected, or suggested sexual conduct.

COMPILATION OF THE LIST

For purposes of this review, the investigators broadly construed what constitutes "sexual abuse." For example, sexual abuse includes sexual relations with a minor, physical contact for sexual gratification, exhibitionism, and propositions of a sexual nature. A minor is defined as a person under eighteen (18) years of age.

To be as accountable and transparent as possible, the following list of priests has been divided into four categories. The standards used to determine an individual's placement on this list are defined below. They are: 1) substantiated allegations of abuse of a minor; 2) credible allegations of abuse of a minor; 3) priests who served in the territory of the Lexington Diocese who are credibly accused of abuse of a minor by other Dioceses or religious communities; and, 4) unsubstantiated allegations of abuse of a minor.

The following lists do not necessarily imply that the priests are guilty of a crime or liable in a civil lawsuit. The United States legal system presumes that a person accused of or charged with a crime is innocent until proven guilty. Similarly, individuals who may be defendants in civil actions are not liable for such claims unless a plaintiff proves by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant is liable for his or her conduct.

Not all allegations of sexual abuse against a priest could be verified to the degree necessary to warrant their inclusion on the lists. In some instances, an anonymous allegation was made, with no supporting evidence. Other times, there was not enough information in the file or elsewhere to determine what had occurred. In other instances, one of the following occurred: the conduct did not involve the sexual abuse of a child; the evidence did not justify a conclusion sexual abuse occurred, the person reporting the alleged abuse did not want the process to go forward or law enforcement determined the allegation was not credible. And, in one situation, inappropriate behavior that appeared to be grooming minors for future abuse was identified, and the priest was removed from active ministry.¹

STANDARDS USED IN THE LISTING OF PRIESTS

Substantiated allegation: Based on the facts and circumstances, there is a reasonable certainty that the allegation is true and that the sexual abuse of a minor occurred. Factors and the combination of factors considered in making this determination include:

- an admission of guilt by the priest;
- a guilty plea accepted by a court;
- multiple allegations by different individuals against a single priest;
- facts disclosed during discovery in a civil suit;
- corroborating testimony by others;
- facts, circumstances and results of a diocesan investigation; and,
- additional corroboration of the report, including whether the priest was laicized.

Credible allegation: Based on the facts and circumstances, the allegation is capable of being believed; it is more likely true than not. In general, there is insufficient information to confirm the report although there are factors that make the allegation capable of being believed. Those factors considered in making this determination include:

- firsthand reporting by the victim;
- a preliminary investigation by a diocesan review board that determines that sufficient evidence of child abuse by a priest exists to forward to the Bishop;
- the amount of detail and accuracy in a statement;
- the appearance of honesty and forthrightness in the statement;
- the possibility that the abuse occurred based on the victim's location, the priest's location, and their proximity to each other at the time of the abuse;
- the relationship between the child and the priest at the time of the abuse;
- the amount of information contained in a civil suit; and,
- the reason, if given, that a priest appears on another dioceses' list of abusive priests.

Publicly Accused Priests: Priests who served in the territory of the Diocese of Lexington and against whom no allegation of child sexual abuse has been made but are listed by other Dioceses as having a credible allegation of abuse of a minor.

Unsubstantiated: Based on the facts and circumstances enough evidence exists, through a criminal, civil or diocesan investigation or otherwise, that the allegation did not occur as claimed.

NOTES: In June 2003, the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis, notified the Diocese of Covington and the Diocese of Lexington about an allegation of child sexual abuse that allegedly occurred in 1973 in Martin, Ky., by William Poole. The St. Paul Archdiocese said the complainant was seeking a financial settlement because of the abuse.

Response by the Diocese of Covington; Placed on the Diocese of Covington's Substantiated Allegations List

- Without notifying Poole of the alleged victim's allegation, the Covington Diocese reached a financial settlement with him on July 16, 2003. Poole was not notified about the settlement until July 28, 2003.
- The Covington Diocese found the individual to be credible, which was allegedly supported by the St. Paul Archdiocese.
- The complainant negotiated without counsel, so the Diocese also settled to avoid the costly litigation of a civil suit.

Response by the Diocese of Lexington; Unsubstantiated

- On July 28, 2003, Bishop Gainer, in accord with the 2002 Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People, suspended Poole and initiated an investigation of the allegation so that the allegation could be heard by the Lexington Diocesan Review Board.
- In October 2003, the Review Board unanimously decided there was nothing to substantiate the allegations.
- A letter was written to the Office of Floyd County Department of Community Based Services about the allegation in January 2004.
- Unsubstantiated based on the following: the alleged victim repeatedly refused to speak with the Diocese of Lexington's investigator; Poole provided a detailed written statement denying the allegation to the Lexington Review Board; the inaction by the Floyd County Department of Community Based Services; and, the Rev. Kevin McDonough of the St. Paul Archdiocese gave several reasons why he did not find the individual to be credible. Finally, the complainant's statement that Poole traveled to St. Paul to meet with him on a certain day was untrue.
